how to contact banksy

Banksy maintains strict anonymity and has no direct public contact method like a personal email, phone number, social media DMs, or agent that responds to general inquiries. He famously avoids conventional channels.

The only official and recognized way to attempt contact (for enquiries, complaints, licensing requests, authentication, press, or anything else) is through his authentication and management office:

Pest Control Office → Website: https://pestcontroloffice.com/

This is explicitly stated on Banksy's own official sitebanksy.co.uk, which redirects all contact there with the note: "For all enquiries, complaints, threats and hate mail visit pestcontroloffice.com. Banksy is not on Facebook, Twitter or represented by any other gallery or agent."

Key points from Pest Control's own site and consistent reporting:

- They handle all communications for the artist.
- For general enquiries: info@pestcontroloffice.com (mentioned in their FAQ).
- For press/media statements: presscontrol@pestcontroloffice.com.
- For authentication of artwork (most common reason people try to "contact" Banksy): Use their dedicated submission process on the site (often auths@pestcontroloffice.com for those enquiries).

Important warnings:

- Banksy does not have an active personal Instagram, Twitter/X, Facebook, or other social media for direct messaging — any accounts claiming to be him (beyond the verified @banksy Instagram that only posts images without interaction) are fake.
- Many unofficial sites, fan pages, "Banksy art shops", exhibitions, or "contact us" forms have nothing to do with the real artist.
- He almost never responds to unsolicited ideas, collaborations, fan mail, activism pitches, or requests — even when sent to Pest Control. Success is extremely rare.

If you're trying to reach him about authenticating a piece, buying/selling, licensing, or a serious press matter, Pest Control is the route. For anything else (e.g., "I have a cool idea!"), the realistic answer is that there's effectively no reliable way to get a personal response from Banksy himself.
